WRIGHT FAMILY ORGANICS ANNOUNCES THE APPOINTMENT OF ALAN ARCHULETA SENIOR VP NATIVE AMERICAN RELATIONS

Alan Archuleta ~ Senior V.P. Native American Relations

Wright Family Organics, LLC, a top California based medical marijuana research and operations organization focused on producing high grade marijuana products through cultivation, manufacturing, dispensing, processing, testing and regulatory support for Tribal Nations, has recently appointed Alan Archuleta to Senior VP of Native American Relations.

“We are extremely honored to have Mr. Archuleta join the Wright Family Organics team as our Senior VP of Native American Relations. His extensive experience, contacts, and recognized standing within the Native American community coupled with his long history of supporting the legalization of Hemp and Cannabis, makes him ideally suited to help build new mutually beneficial partnerships with federally recognized Indian tribes entering the marijuana business on sovereign tribal lands across the country," stated Tim Wright, President, Wright Family Organics. "I look forward to working closely with Alan and his numerous contacts within the Native American community to establish Wright Family Organics as one of the first turn key development groups in the tribal cannabis marketplace and to help provide further economic and social empowerment to Native Americans for the next seven generations.”

Mr Archuleta is a Tribal Member and Cannabis Commissioner of Mooretown Rancheria band of Maidu Indians, located in Oroville, CA. Alan Archuleta served as Tribal Treasurer of Mooretown Rancheria for two terms (2000-2008). He was responsible for ensuring the accuracy and integrity of the financial reports of the tribal enterprises, which included a casino, K.O.A. campground/RV park, Hotel, and gas station/mini-mart.

Mr Archuleta has a true passion for creating safe access and utilizing our natural resources responsibly with Cannabis and Hemp. Mr Archuleta is the author of the best-selling eBook, "The Gospel of Hemp: How Hemp Can Save Our World". He has been a cannabis law reform activist for over 20 years, and maintained operational leadership roles at the first state-legal medical cannabis dispensary in Sacramento, CA. He is a U.C. Davis graduate.

ALAN ARCHULETA commented, "I'm very excited for this opportunity to work with Tim Wright and Wright Family Organics to develop new marijuana focused business opportunities on Native American lands. I have known and worked closely with Tim I have no doubt that this shared understanding of the importance of family and community will contribute significantly to the success of our future projects and help to create further new jobs and economic prosperity for all our partners."

The potential for Native American groups to begin regulated production and sale of cannabis on tribal lands is an entirely new growth opportunity for businesses everywhere, more jobs, support sector growth etc. This has only recently started to gain momentum after the U.S. Department of Justice publicly released an official memo in December 2014 informing all United States Attorneys that their marijuana enforcement efforts on Native American tribal lands should be guided by a 2013 U.S. Department of Justice memo previously urging prosecutors not to interfere with state-sanctioned cannabis regulations as long as certain conditions were met. According to recently published statistics, there are 326 federally recognized Native American reservations and 566 federally recognized Indian tribes in the United States.
